MARCH 1979

ISSUE TWO

In this issue I feel a "rounding off" of my personal History is called for plus a few anecdotes and observations leading off from the same. I will conclude the issue with a description of my researches in the same format and terminology that Bryan I'Anson used in the History, it could almost be an additional chapter.

I am grateful that my searches have proved the worth of Family traditions and that the stories I listened to with sympathy when Grandmother was very old, have proved true or likely and are not the ramblings of an old lady.

When Jinny I'Anson (Grandmother) was about six or seven, the whole family went to dinner at rich relatives. There were no details as Grandmother was very young and the Family unit broke up on the death of her parents when she was only twelve years old.

However, it was a "posh" affair which remained fixed in Grandmother's young mind because of the following incident.

They were waited on at the table by a butler. Grandmother had a childish habit of eating her vegetables first, saving her meat as a treat at the end. Unfortunately, as she finished her vegetables the butler whisked her plate away, possibly a far greater snob than his employer !

The sense of injustice engendered fortunately kept the memory of the visit to Howe Hall alive from the 1880s to the 1950s when she told the story to her Grandson as she knitted by the fire.

The story confirmed that the two I'Anson families in Thirsk knew they were related, though a wide social gap had been created due to the varying fortunes of the families.

Both heads of the two families were John I'Anson, named from common ancestors.

One was, at the time, a Major in the 1st Volunteer Battn. The Princess of Wales Own Yorkshire Regt. (now Green Howards), the County Councillor for Topcliffe, a Commissioner for Income Tax, a J. P., owner of Howe Hall and many acres of land in the Parish of Pickhill but the primary source of income was the ownership of Licenced property around the North Riding.

The other John, of course, was my Great-Grandfather, a talented monumental mason and carver but completely without private means or social position.

Both families had a daughter in 1879. John of Howe Hall had Mary Isobel born on the 7th March and John, the stonemason, had my Grandmother Jane Isobel on the 13th March 1879. I can't believe the use of the name Isobel is coincidental, doubtless Great Grandfather saw the announcement of the birth of his cousin's child and copied the name.

A strange fact leading off from this is that Grandmother's certificate was filed under Janson rather than I'Anson. The Registrar's attempt to keep the two families separate ? I am afraid suspicions of Victorian snobbery are felt when one checks "Bulmers History & Directory of the North Riding" reference Thirsk 1890. Major John is given all his offices etc. and is accorded his name in correct format - I'Anson - but my two great uncles who were mounted Postmen for the G. P. O. were carefully separated by being called Ianson - such is the way of the world, or as it was in 1890 !

It's funny how little things tie up in Family History. My first article in "I'Anson Times" was on the subject of the song 'Lass of Richmond Hill' - Francis I'Anson. Colonel John I'Anson of Howe was an Officer in the Volunteers, as I mentioned previously, and the 1st Battn. Volunteer Regiment Princess of Wales Own Yorkshire Regiment was stationed at Richmond. The song is now the Green Howards Regimental March! "Sweet Lass of Richmond Hill" - who suggested it? Col. I'Anson?
